

Film Screening

The Warrigal Creek Massacre

This country has a hidden history that is not widely acknowledged.

This documentary was made by university journalism students and staff. It was made to better understand our country's true history. It is about the importance of truth-telling.

The screening will be followed by a panelled discussion about the effects of these appalling events of Australia's colonial past and how they continue to have deep repercussions today.

The documentary deals with trauma. Support is offered and discretion is advised.
